Pet Project

From the great-looking site to their styling products, Cheengoo Boutique has the right stuff—and an unusual name. Guess that's because Korean-born Liz Paik is a web designer and the name means "friend or companion." Josie, the Atomic pussycat, has a Yum water bowl ($36) with a cool biomorphic handhold, and we're eyeing the Martini collar ($32) for Auggie, AR's latest canine companion (page 13). cheengoo.com

Applying A&C to MCM

You reformed bungalow-philes are saying, "Teco? That's Arts and Crafts!" But look at those sculptural shapes; can't you picture them gracing a teak credenza or sitting on a minimalist mantel? Prairie Arts' vase collection, based on vintage originals, comes in six matte colors. Green Orb sits 8" high, while the 4 1/2" Kiss puts you in mind of 71% Venezuelan Criollo cocoa. Seven shapes beginning at $45; prairie-arts.com for retailers.

Table Envy

Those yummy colors make you want to order a whole stable of tables from Peter Sandback's New Hampshire company. Made of lightweight polymerized cement veneer on aluminum or wood bases, the choices are mind numbing: White oak or cherry? Walnut or lacquered maple? A pedestal Wabash coffee table in pea soup with a brushed-chrome base or maybe a modular Garfield in three shades of pink ...

Forty colors, stain resistant and durable; what more do you want?

Hey, That's My Street

Danny Heller's photorealism will make you think he's been trolling your suburb, snapping a shot of your neighbor wrenching on his Camaro. The oil paintings immortalize the San Fernando Valley where he grew up—graffiti, power lines, muscle cars and all. "I paint the reality of suburbia: how the idea of safe, family oriented tract housing has been perpetuated and how it has decayed," he writes on his site, dannyhellerart.com. A solo show celebrating Eichler homes opens June 22 at Terrence Rogers Fine Art in Santa Monica.
